..Analysis

This ordinance requires employers located within the geographic boundaries of the city to provide paid sick leave benefits as follows:

1. All employers shall provide a minimum of one hour of paid sick leave for every 30 hours worked by an employee. Employers will not be required to provide more than 72 hours of sick leave for an employee in a calendar year.

2. Employees of small businesses will not accrue more than 40 hours of paid sick leave in a calendar year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. Paid sick leave shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment, and employees shall be entitled to use accrued paid sick leave beginning on the 90th calendar day following commencement of their employment. After the 90th calendar day of employment, employees may use sick leave as it is accrued.

4. Any employer with a paid leave policy such as a paid time-off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this ordinance that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as paid leave under this ordinance, is not required to provide additional paid sick leave.

The requirements of this ordinance apply to all employers within the city, except the federal government, the state of Wisconsin, including any office, department, agency, authority, institution, association, society or other body of the state, including the legislative and judiciary, or county or local government.

Authority to enforce the provisions of this ordinance, including but not limited to the power to receive complaints, remedy violations, adopt rules, issue subpoenas and other redress following a hearing regarding a violation, is assigned to the equal rights commission.

..Body

Whereas, A large number of workers in the city of Milwaukee do not have paid sick days available to them. This problem is most prevalent among part-time employees but also is widespread among full-time employees working in many sectors of the local economy. The problem is greatest among workers of the local economy. The problem is greatest among workers toward the lower end of the economic spectrum, although it is by no means limited to such workers and affects many middle-income workers as well as higher-income workers. Further, a large number of workers who have paid sick days available to them do not have an adequate number of hours of such leave to reasonably meet their needs. Even more of these workers are not allowed to use what paid sick days they have for the care of a family member.

Whereas, The absence or inadequacy of paid sick days among workers in Milwaukee poses serious problems not only for affected workers but also for their families, their employers, the health care system, and the community as a whole. Among these problems are the following:

1. When workers have no paid sick days or an inadequate amount available to them, they are more likely to come to work when they are sick. Working when sick is often counterproductive from a health standpoint, because it may cause the employee's condition to worsen or may delay the employee's recovery, thus compounding the hardship to the employee and his or her family caused by the illness. In addition, the employee's job productivity is likely to suffer if he or she is working while sick or injured.
2. Employees who come to work when they are sick may expose other employees to infectious diseases, such as the flu. When that occurs, some of the employees who have been exposed will also become ill, which not only creates hardships for those workers and their families but also increases costs to the health care system and undermines job productivity.
3. In those industries where workers have substantial contact with customers, or with certain goods that come into contact with customers, such as food, there is a risk that a sick worker will jeopardize the health of members of the public by exposing them, directly or indirectly, to germs and disease.
4. When workers do not have paid sick days or an adequate amount of paid sick days available to them, they are more likely to come to work notwithstanding the medical problems facing their children or other family members. When that occurs, ill or injured family members may not receive the care, attention and medical assistance necessary to aid their recovery. Their health problems consequently may intensify or be prolonged, because it often will take longer for them to recover when responsible adult family members are not able to care for them at home or take them to medical appointments.
5. A worker who has no paid sick days or an inadequate amount to take time off to care for a sick child may send the child, even though sick, to school or a child care center, thereby exposing other children to germs and disease. Inevitably, some children thus exposed will become ill due to their close proximity to and interactions with the sick child. Equally problematic, a worker may keep an older child home from school to care for a younger ill sibling.

6. Without adequate paid sick days, working parents who must stay home when they, their children, or other family members are ill or injured lose earnings and may risk a loss of employment, thereby placing the family's economic security in jeopardy and increasing the likelihood that taxpayer-funded sources will have to be used to provide for the family's needs.

7. Without adequate paid sick days, it is much more difficult for workers to schedule medical appointments for themselves and their children and other family members. As a result, routine medical appointments that can prevent the onset of illness or injury are often not scheduled; and medical appointments to treat an existing illness or injury are not scheduled, or are scheduled only after the illness or injury has become acute. When medical care is sacrificed in the short run, medical costs increase in the long run. Hospitalization of patients, with its attendant costs, sometimes becomes necessary because preventive health measures were not taken earlier.

8. Without adequate paid sick days, it is much more difficult for workers to care for family members on a short-term basis. As a result, it sometimes becomes necessary for family members to be placed in nursing homes, thereby increasing nursing care costs.

; and

Whereas, The foregoing problems are particularly serious for single-parent households. The unavailability or inadequacy of paid sick leave hits women and people of color in the Milwaukee workforce particularly hard, but no demographic or ethnic group is spared from hardship when sick leave is unavailable or inadequate. To safeguard the public welfare, health, safety and prosperity of Milwaukee, it is essential that all persons working in our community be able to earn paid sick days that are adequate to ensure a decent and healthy life for them and their families. Ensuring the adequacy of paid sick days for employees in Milwaukee will ensure a more stable workforce in our community and thereby benefit not only workers and their families but employers and the community as a whole. It is in the interest of all Milwaukeeans to require that employers benefiting from the opportunity to do business here make available to their employees a reasonable number of paid sick days. Implementation of this policy serves the public interest and constitutes a significant public benefit.

;now, therefore

The Mayor and Common Council of the City of Milwaukee do ordain as follows:

Part 1. Section 109-15-4-h and i of the code is created to read:

109-15. Equal Rights Commission.
