Alderman Bauman,

My name is _____ and I am a constituent in your district at _____.

I am writing to raise a concern about illegal parking and traffic obstruction caused by delivery drivers servicing Paper Table Food Co., the ghost kitchen located at 733 N. Milwaukee St., Milwaukee, WI 53202.

Delivery drivers for services including DoorDash and Uber Eats are regularly double parking on Milwaukee St. — both in the single southbound lane and in the northbound lanes — blocking traffic entirely or reducing it to a single lane. The business has a loading zone, but it is insufficient for the volume of delivery vehicle traffic they receive. This is an ongoing and recurring problem.

This creates a genuine safety hazard on one of the busier streets and commercial corridors in the area, and it negatively impacts neighboring businesses and residents. Since I last raised this issue with your office in December 2023, the situation has gotten worse. The problem has escalated to the point that a sign has been posted on the sidewalk reading "Any Vehicles Blocking Traffic Will Be Ticketed" — a photo of which I have attached. While I understand the intent, enforcement of this sign requires police presence, and officers are not often in the area to respond and ticket violators in a timely manner before they have already left for their deliveries.

I am aware of the City of Milwaukee parking complaint process through the Department of Public Works (<https://mke.citizencomplaints.org/>), but this system is not practical for this situation. Filing a complaint requires stopping my vehicle, and by the time I could do so, the delivery drivers have typically already left for their deliveries — making it nearly impossible to document violations in real time while driving.

I would appreciate your attention to this matter and welcome a conversation with you or a member of your staff. I am also happy to be directed to the appropriate city department if there is a more direct channel for this complaint.

Thank you,

Was out and about on personal trips and went down Milwaukee Ave on Wednesday evening and then during the day on Thursday, this week, and vehicles were double parked on both sides, both times.

Hi Bob,

I just wanted to share my experience with you. Last night, just after 7:00, we were driving south on Milwaukee St. when we got into the intersection of Milwaukee and Mason, we had to stop as a vehicle was backing up to get into a parking space. They backed up about 100 feet, causing southbound traffic to halt.

He did this first, down the northbound lane before moving into the southbound lane. There were 3 cars double parked in the southbound lane and 2 cars double parked in the most eastern northbound lane.

I thought this issue was supposed to have been addressed / resolved. We take this route only about once a month in the evening and the street is quite literally, constantly filled with double parked cars.

Maybe the city needs to have some parking enforcement officers work the second shift to deal with these folks?

Thank you, Alderman Bauman.

Please see attached photos from last night.

As you can see, there are 6 cars just sitting in the street. Paper Table has no responsible individual on duty to police the delivery drivers, so they just sit in the street, commandeer our loading zone, block our loading zone, and our customers cannot valet their cars or are blocked in and can't leave. This is a daily occurrence that we will begin documenting. We call parking enforcement and MPD multiple times a day for assistance as well, which only offers temporary relief. The root of issue remains.

We look forward to a more permanent solution.

Best Regards,

Dear Alderman Bauman,

I am writing to formally raise ongoing concerns regarding Paper Table and the persistent traffic, safety, and nuisance issues that have surrounded its operations since it opened.

C at this location. Since Paper Table began operating nearby, its delivery-centric business model—reliant on Uber Eats, DoorDash, and similar services—has resulted in chronic congestion on our block. Delivery drivers routinely double-park, block traffic lanes, occupy loading zones for extended periods, and interfere with access for neighboring businesses. This has materially impacted our operations, including preventing our customers from safely accessing valet services.

More concerning, these conditions have repeatedly escalated into hostile and unsafe interactions. Delivery drivers associated with Paper Table have exhibited aggressive and confrontational behavior when asked to move illegally parked vehicles. I was recently involved in a verbal confrontation that included threats of physical harm after attempting to briefly use my designated loading zone to drop off items for our business, which had been illegally occupied by a delivery driver for over 40 minutes. Additionally, earlier this year, I believe there was a physical incident involving a valet employee related to similar delivery-driver conduct.

It is also common for delivery drivers to emit strong marijuana odors from their vehicles while parked on the street, raising additional public safety concerns regarding impairment and judgment in an already congested area.

At its core, the issue is structural. Paper Table's business model generates a volume and pattern of vehicular traffic that the immediate street infrastructure cannot reasonably accommodate. While the business is not technically a drive-through, it functionally operates as one. The only element missing is the physical handoff through a window; otherwise, the model depends on continuous vehicle arrivals, short-term stopping, and curbside food pickup. This creates the same impacts as a drive-through operation without the zoning, traffic controls, or dedicated parking such a model would typically require.

This type of operation necessitates a dedicated parking or staging area for pickups, which is not feasible at this location. As a result, the business is effectively circumventing traditional zoning and occupancy definitions applicable to a standard sit-down restaurant, while imposing significant external costs on neighboring businesses and public safety.

Given these circumstances, I respectfully request that your office review whether Paper Table's current operations are compliant with zoning, traffic, and occupancy requirements, and whether corrective action—including potential zoning reclassification or occupancy review—is warranted to address the ongoing nuisance and safety issues.

Thank you for your time and attention.

Best Regards,
