No more poison killing our communities(El Charro Liquor)(owners are not even Latinx using a Latinx name to trick people to make a dollar with a lack or moral right to human life.

This is not rage this is an actual fact that white fragility chooses to ignore so brown and black folks keep killing themselves with the assistance of a white racist society that keeps this structural and systemic racism alive. So stop looking at issues that are killing black and brown folks true a white lens that's not sustainable and it doesn't change anything.

No more poison in our vulnerable communities, we don't need it or want it and it killing our health and increasing alcohol-influenced car deaths in an extremely condensed area where the majority of residents that live there are brown and black folks and the minority are white. The individuals that own the property don't even leave in the area so why would they care when they leave at the end of their work shift and go to their safe white suburbs?

Redlining demarcated low-density residential zones for wealthy Whites which excluded poor and non-White people as well as certain businesses, including alcohol retailers. Planning and zoning created neighborhoods across the SF Bay Area in which non-wealthy, non-White people and the density of alcohol retailers and housing were excluded or allowed.

Structural racism measured by historic federal land valuation zones predicted the collocation of off-premises alcohol outlet density with lower-income and non-White residents. Greater alcohol outlet density, a marker of alcohol availability, is associated with poorer and predominantly minority neighborhoods. However, poorer populations, African Americans, and Latinxs report using less alcohol compared to Whites and wealthier groups.

From an economic perspective, alcohol retailers might be expected to locate in areas of higher consumer demand. However, in the USA African Americans and Latinxs report a lower prevalence of drinking compared to Whites.

As a structural determinant of health, racism is hypothesized to impact health inequities through racialized socio-political processes which limit access to social goods including health care, food, and employment on the one hand. And increase risks for social harm including incarceration and police violence (Bor et al., 2018) on the other.

In the USA, a key structure of racism has been the creation of racial spaces. By racial spaces, we mean geographic areas of human activity defined by the presence or absence of people according to their purported races, with the overt aim of creating spatial patterns of subordination: "a social reality created by and experienced through patterns of mobility and immobility that have been organized around the historical practices and logic of white supremacy," (Iglesias, 2000).
