Director Mahan,

As the City heads into 2023, I would ask that you consider supporting the work of the Community Collaborative Commission. Established by the Common Council in 2020, the Community Collaborative Commission has an important role to play not only in the resolution of the Collins settlement, but also as an invaluable intermediary between the City and its residents and as an instrument for gathering information to inform law enforcement policies, practices and procedures going forward. The Commission would therefore like to be considered for a $60,000 grant from the Community Development Grants Administration for 2023.

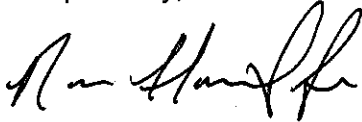

The Commission proposes to spend the money as follows:

- $30,000 to pay Carlton Mayers, a consultant, to facilitate 12 public meetings, in collaboration with MPD in 12 aldermanic districts (3 were already held in 2022) to use as a base for creation of the Community Oriented Policing Engagement Plan.
- $10,000 to pay for four quarterly, in-person public listening sessions to be held in 2023. This money will be used for location rental and food/refreshments for attendees.
- $20,000 to be used by the Community Research and Survey Committee of the Commission to continue its work on hiring a consultant to survey 7,000 city residents on their perception of the police.

It is our strong belief that the Community Collaborative Commission's role as intermediary between the public and the City when it comes to issues around law enforcement aligns well with the CDBGA's request for proposals for public services for low-income persons.

Thank you very much for your support!

Respectfully,

Director Hamilton,

As the City heads into 2023, I would ask that you consider supporting the work of the Community Collaborative Commission. As you are aware, the Community Collaborative Commission has an important role to play not only in the resolution of the Collins settlement, but also as an invaluable intermediary between the City and its residents and as an instrument for gathering information to inform law enforcement policies, practices and procedures. The Commission is therefore requesting $60,000 from the Office of Violence Prevention for 2023.

The Commission proposes the spend the money as follows:

- $30,000 to pay Carlton Mayers, a consultant, to facilitate 12 public meetings, in collaboration with MPD in 12 aldermanic districts (3 were already held in 2022) to use as a base for creation of the Community Oriented Policing Engagement Plan.
- $10,000 to pay for four quarterly, in-person public listening sessions to be held in 2023. This money will be used for location rental and food/refreshments for attendees.
- $20,000 to be used by the Community Research and Survey Committee of the Commission to continue its work on hiring a consultant to survey 7,000 city residents on their perception of the police.

The Commission thinks that these expenses align neatly with the mission of the Office of Violence Prevention and would therefore be a worthy use of the Office's resources.

Thank you very much for your support!
