City Planning Commission:

Please proceed with granting the zoning variance, so that the development on Hackett Avenue will be viable. The church community that is selling the land for this project is most likely to feel its impact, and they are supporting the development. In fact, it is vital to their survival.

The lawsuit filed by neighbors to the development of a 55-unit complex on Hackett are classic NIMBY moves. Their goal is to delay the process in hopes of discouraging the developers from proceeding.

This stalling tactic may have worked in other situations, but let's not give it traction here in Milwaukee.

Renters are people (voters), too. And they want to enjoy the neighborhood in which they live, just as those who own their dwellings.

Sincerely,
Katherine Katter
