The existing railroad tie planting bed on south side of house has rotted and needs to be replaced. The new bed will be created with a Waukesha Buff lannon stone retaining wall. This color will match the existing lannon stone near the foundation of the house. See the following link for exact color: www.halquist.com/downloads/landscape2014_final.pdf.

Each course will be 4 inches thick with a sawn top and bottom. The wall will be approximately 20 inches high.

The new bed will curve around the back (southwestern) corner of the house and join the planting bed to the south of the back steps. Please see photos 3 and 4.

The planting bed to the north of the back steps will be edged with 2 courses of the same lannon stone. Please see photo 4.

The southeastern end of the bed will end in a gentle curve instead of a right angle as it now does. Please see photo 6.
