Proposed New Industrial Zoning
District: Industrial-Commercial
(IC)

CURRENT MILWAUKEE INDUSTRIAL DISTRICTS

IH – INDUSTRIAL HEAVY

IM – INDUSTRIAL MIX

IL – INDUSTRIAL LIGHT

IO – INDUSTRIAL OFFICE

IC ZONING INTENT

- Maintain industrial as the primary use.
- Targeted for older, urban industrial areas with vacancies yet still contain viable and productive industrial uses.
- Limit retail as accessory to the industrial use or compatible with a relevant Comprehensive Plan.
- Not an everyday commercial district.
- Avoid land uses that conflict with industrial ones.
- Increase flexibility with additional office and limited commercial uses not otherwise permitted in Industrial Heavy.
- Limit the scope of non-industrial uses found in Industrial Mixed.
- Avoid additional Special Uses / BOZA
- Do not make existing conforming businesses non-conforming
- Apply to similar industrial corridors or areas.

Valley industrial buildings find new life as ... industrial buildings

"We love the authenticity," Wright said.

John Klein / for the Journal Sentinel

The former loading dock area could eventually be the beer garden for Kevin Wright's Third Space Brewing. Steve Looft and other investors are redeveloping some long-vacant industrial properties into the future home of Third Space Brewery and other new uses.

Menomonee Valley redevelopment

The neighboring buildings will include a craft brewery and other new manufacturing uses.

While a lot of Milwaukee's older industrial buildings are being redeveloped as apartments, offices and retail space, Steve Looft has another idea.

Looft plans to convert three older, long-vacant Menomonee Valley industrial buildings into updated industrial space.

He and his investors are launching the project after securing Third Space Brewing LLC, a start-up craft brewery, as a tenant. And Looft is in discussions with other prospective tenants that

Development returns business uses to old, industrial neighborhood

St. Paul Ave. sees buildings sold, remodeled for businesses

Four properties have been sold since 2012 on a 10-block stretch of W. St. Paul Ave., where the city is encouraging creation of a home décor business district.

About 10 blocks of St. Paul Ave., west of the I-94 overpass, are marked by the same type of old, industrial brick buildings that have been transformed into apartments and condos throughout the downtown Milwaukee area.

But recent investments and development along the avenue are closer to that street's roots as a place for work.

At four properties sold within the past three years, plans that have surfaced involve commercial activity: offices, light industrial use, event space and possible antique shops.

Those investments have occurred as the city's proposed update to its Menomonee Valley plan includes continued development of avenue businesses that make home and commercial décor, featuring showrooms to become a regional shopping draw.

New zoning would create Menomonee Valley home décor district

By Tom Daykin of the Journal Sentinel

A new Milwaukee zoning proposal would allow Menomonee Valley businesses and city officials to pursue plans to create a home décor design and showroom district.

The district is among five potential major developments included in the city's updated comprehensive plan for the valley, which the Common Council and Mayor Tom Barrett approved in June.
