Our shared driveway was in disrepair, crumbling, posed significant safety hazards to people as well as vehicles and had the potential to allow water to leak into the house due to disrepair along the foundation line. Along with our neighbors, we replaced the concrete driveway with a new concrete driveway in effectively the same foot print (north boundary of driveway was slightly widened by 6 inches to allow safer access to vehicles). Given that the new driveway is a replacement of the same material, color, scope and size of the previous driveway, the new driveway did not destory or adversely affect any exterior architechitural feature of the house and did not adversely affect the external apperance of the house. Given that the new driveway is a replacement of the same material, color, scope and size of the previous driveway, the new driveway is as sensitive to the mass and proportions of the existing house and is as appropriately-scaled as the previous driveway. The new driveway is clearly not an attempt to re-create a historic structure.
