Husband here, even though I calmly showed them the street signage indicating I was legally able to park on this part of the public road/curb, their employee's continued to intimidate, harass, and threaten my property (car).

Then a Steny's employee assaulted me on the curb, he had to get dragged back by other employees. I could smell the alcohol on his breath as he got in my face and pushed his whole body into me trying to knock me over.

I captured it on video too, in addition to their harassment and intimidation prior to the assault. I also got a chipped tooth and the black eye that came from some coward patrons that sucker punched me and then ran away (I'm 6'3" and very fit).

I didn't swing back because I didn't want to get shot, stabbed, or have my skull caved in by a bunch of drunks emboldened by Steny's employees and a mob mentality to gang up on me.

I didn't catch the sucker punch on video because I stopped recording shortly after the initial assault by the Steny's employee because I needed to focus on my safety.

Stay safe out there Milwaukee, I won't be posting the video as I'm submitting it to my lawyer as evidence.

Boycott Steny's.

I would expect nothing less from a bar that killed one of their bartenders because they insisted on being one of the first places that opened to in-person service during the COVID pandemic.

<https://www.wisn.com/article/bar-owners-stress-importance-of-masks-after-bartender-dies-from-coronavirus/33385698>

Glad the owner "mourned" the loss of his employee, wish he'd given more of a fuck about the guy while he was alive.

I'm with you: boycott Steny's

I called Stenny's and asked if it's normal for their employees to assault people who park outside of their building. The girls response after some silence and hesitation was "uhhh, it wasn't Stenny's employees but it was outside of Stenny's". They will try to cover this up and save their shitty business.

Agree, as someone with a business in the third ward that pays for a loading zone every year, not much sympathy for a business that chooses to intimidate other Milwaukeeans rather than just paying the $120 or whatever it is.

Come to think of it I think you get the loading zone for five years

106 ↑ ↓ Reply Share ...

Damn that's only double what residents pay for night permits.

18 ↑ ↓ Reply Share ...

1 hr. ago

Yea and $120 is a hell of a lot less than what it actually costs the city in labor and materials to put up the signage for a loading zone.

11 ↑ ↓ Reply Share ...

And there's probably at least a dozen people with a night permit per sign relating to it.

Update: my husband decided to stay parked there and like 7+ large dudes came out and tried to intimidate him, with one getting in his face. Luckily he got it all on audio. Then he went back out to take pictures as well, and they continued to mock and call him names for taking pics.

Edit: I did an update #2, but if you wanna hear about the encounter in my honey's words—here is the link to his update:

I used to live in that place so believe me when I tell you, unless you're a Bills fan, Steny's is a good place to do exactly two things: eat shitty bar food and watch sports, or have a shot and a bottle of beer before jumping in a bus to go to a game. There's no other reason to go there, and you can probably work out a better way to get to the game.

And a note to any aspiring "cool bar" owners, it doesn't matter if you have 30 craft beers on tap if you don't keep it fresh and clean the tap lines. Never ceases to amaze me.

receipts and photos I would post if I could figure out how to in this comment.

My husband was punched in the face twice, got a shiner and a chipped tooth, and one of our tires was slashed. My husband didn't fight back because it really wouldn't have been a fair fight. He is one dude. There are cameras all around, luckily.

We were going in and out of one of the gay bars across the street on Second (note we are a seemingly straight couple but we both consider ourselves queer and prefer LGBTQIA+ establishments) and my husband was in a pink shirt and tight jean shorts. We do believe some of the motivation behind these men's actions were based in homophobia.

All in all, rough night.

Definitely suggest submitting a complaint to the city license dept. I did so with a parking lot and because they had a complaint on file, they had to appear at a committee and explain themselves (and basically grovel to them and apologize to me in front of a bunch of people) to get permission to get the license they were applying for (which they only applied for because I complained to the dept and to MPD about them being unlicensed...MPD basically sent the hounds after them until they applied for their license). It's minor, but satisfying. Oh so satisfying.

Almost like if they wanted the spot for their business they should have reserved it in some clear and legal way....

That sucks though, I definitely used to occasionally take the shuttle from that place (it was near a bus line to get me home, so very convenient if I felt like crushing beers) and I have even played there a few times, the staff were always cool. I haven't been in years though so maybe it really went downhill, the situation sounds like a very bad look.

Damn sorry about all that bs you two had to deal with. I was at the public market tiki bar last week Saturday. Walked up to bar to order, very busy, some drunk asshole said something to the effect "we paid to reserve this spot at the bar, so you can't order here".. me not knowing what he was talking about asked if he was joking or serious. Dude literally shoved me back, shocked, I said what the fuck and to not touch me, he shoves me again this time i'm thinking we are about to throw hands at this crowded ass bar.. (which I really do not want to do for very obvious reasons). At this moment his 2 other dumbass friends talk him down from what ever power trip he's on. Crazy how upset this grown man got over absolutely NOTHING. So I left the bar, got out drinks though aye and then promptly left.. but yeah, ruined my night. Idk if it's just me but it seems like lately when I've been out I've noticed some pretty drunk angry assholes. Probably just a coincidence
