

Jennifer Current

As a Licensed Professional Landscape Architect, I have lead projects ranging in scale from small courtyards to large campus master plans, with diverse client groups including private, corporate, institutional, non-profit, civic, and public, located in the US, across Europe, and China. In Academia, I have directed MLA, MArch, and BArch design studios focused on urban form, post-industrial planning and revitalization, adaptive reuse, the urban waterfront, and soft systems ecologies in a city context. I have taught graduate and undergraduate lecture and seminar courses that examined urban ecology, landscape history, and contemporary landscape theory. I have lead technical courses on site grading, stormwater management, and detailing as well as visual communication skills including 2D and 3D digital media and physical model building. My invited lectures have encompassed topics such as landscape as infrastructure, nature and artifice, the idea of legacy, designing in model, and the landscape legacy of Dan Kiley. I have served on the City of Milwaukee Board of Zoning Appeals for over 3 years offering insight into how special uses and variances affect the function and aesthetics of the public realm.
