CJI Year 5 Annual Report

The Crime and Justice Institute (CJI) praised the FPC for its relative stability, including a full complement of commissioners. The report also lauded the FPC's outreach to minority communities in Milwaukee, including the Diversity in Promotions survey, which sought responses from personnel who are eligible for promotion at each testing position. The FPC reports learning a great deal about ways to improve testing equity.

CJI did note the impact of Act 12 as a significant challenge. In particular, the report noted the loss of the Commission's authority to set policies for both MPD and the MFD as well as law enforcement unions' additional influence over the candidates selected for the Commission.

Citizen Complaints

The 106 citizen complaints received by the FPC in 2021 (the most recent year for which the FPC has complete information) contained a total of 279 distinct allegations. Of 270 allegations that could be investigated, 146 (54.1%) were filed against MPD employees (named or unnamed) and six (2.2%) were filed against MFD employees. In the remaining 109 allegations (40.4%), the officer field was left blank.

The largest number of cases had a disposition of “baseless or unfounded,” which applied to 77 allegations (28.5%). The finding for 71 allegations (26.3%) was “closed file,” indicating that the complaint could not receive further investigation or rapid resolution without more information. This was higher than the previous year’s 58 allegations in this category.

30 allegations (11%) were categorized as exonerated. An additional 10 allegations (4%) resulted in a policy review. Notably, no allegations were indicated to have been resolved through the FPC’s rapid resolution process in 2021, down significantly from 25.7% of allegations in 2019 and 3.7% in 2020.

The most frequent misconduct alleged in these complaints related to department procedures (91 allegations, 33.7%). 79 allegations (29.3%) concerned department services, 19 (7.0%) were related to use of force, 15 alleged discourtesy (5.6%), 4 concerned disparate treatment (1.5%), and 51 (18.9%) were determined to have no allegation. 11 allegations (4.1%) did not include a category for the type of misconduct. This is a decrease from the previous year, when 28 allegations (14.7%) were left blank.
