April 12, 2019

4:30 – 5:30

The Oshkosh Public Library, designed by architect, William Waters, opened on September 3, 1900. The Neo-classical style building was constructed with a smooth cut-stone façade and copper fascia. A large colonnade of six two-story ionic columns along the main entrance portico support the pediment above the columns. The stone stairs leading from the street are flanked by large stone pediments supporting the bronze lions, "Sawyer" and "Harris". The low-pitched clay tile roof is adorned with a dome visible from most vantage points. The library's original interior features painted plaster archways, hardwood floors, original light fixtures, ceramic tiles, and intricate iron railings.

Expansion and Restoration Project (1993)

A large addition surrounding the original William Waters building on three sides, was carefully designed to complement the original building in symmetry. A view of its stone exterior wall on the first and second floors. The entire second floor, new construction in 1993, boasts structural columns sunk into the 1967 foundation and the overall footprint of the building increased to the north. The second-floor skylight, a signature of Lon

Frye, is centered on the dome of the Wm Waters building, forty-six feet above the floor. The project architect, firm of Howard, Needles, Tammen & Bergendorff of Milwaukee associated with Frye Gillan Mollinaro Architects of Chicago, known for sensitive additions to historic library structures.

The Washington Avenue Neoclassical Historic District was established in 2017.

The six contributing buildings are in a two-block area:

- Oshkosh Public Library (1900, Neoclassical, architect, William Waters)
- Fraternal Reserve Association – NRHP (1914, Georgian Revival, architect, Henry Auler) (Washington Place Historical Flats)
- Oshkosh Masonic Temple (1925, Neoclassical, architect, Henry Auler)
- The Goettmann Printing Company (1924, Neoclassical)
- Wisconsin National Life Insurance Building – NRHP (1925, Neoclassical, architectural firm of Auler, Jensen & Brown) (Winnebago County Human Services)
- U.S. Post Office (1929, Neoclassical, Acting Supervising Architect, James A. Wetmore, opened 1931), (office building)

Nominations are due March 22!
